Sustainable fast food?

I have read them articles.

I think it's good that they start, because if the restaurant is well frequented other restaurants also decide to buy their food locally and healthier. I don't think it's bad to spend a little more money when I know that my food is well made.

I think you are right, if everybody pays a little bit more it is good for the environment.

The fact that they also use leftover food has great advantages. It is better for the environment and so not so much has to be produced.

I wish them good luck with their restaurant and I think it's great that they are starting.
