B5- Farmers Blog

Industrial farming is a very spreaded livestock farming where many animals are held in small spaces and are feed with high calorie foods and antibiotics so they get fat fast and can get slaughtered. The meat gets selled very cheap and the farmers get not much income.

Because of the high calorie foods the animals get fat really fast and the meat can get selled in a high number but because of that a lot of food waste get produced. The animals are held in tiny cages so many animals can get raised in a small place but diseases can get spread, so the animals will get feed with antibiotics and the meat that gets selled and buyed will be full of antibiotics which is not healthy in high amounts. The food that get fed to animals in factory farming is not good for humans but it is cheaper.

In general is factory farming not justified morally and not healthy if the meat gets eaten in a high amount by a single person because of the antibiotics. In my opinion factory farming should be completely abolished, the farmers don't get enough money and the animals get harmed.
