

Finding one's identity

He is talking about: every person is different, everybody is reaching a success but in a different way, everybody is unique and is handling a situation in a different way, he says that he categorized the type of people, all of us are communicating different, all in all we are different by our doings and everybody is having personally properties

When I should decide between introverted and extraverted I would take definitely introverted because it describes more my personality. I'm not directly like extravert people. For example I wouldn't say too the a-word because it isn't my way, that wouldn't be me. Furthermore I'm more the locked person that is the reason why I would take introverted because it is describing more my personality.
