

Brian Little talks about the different personalities and more specifically the difference between extraverted and introverted people. He says that extraverts perform better with more stimulation and will seek action such as social events etc, while an introverted person might be more comfortable with less stimulation and less social interactions.

I think based on what he said I'd probably be an extrovert. I think I perform better when I'm surrounded by people.