The generation Z is a very digital generation.

The values are characteristics like creativity, sustainability, and the search for meaning.

In general, I think that this kind of life makes you focus and you do something very purposefully.

But I can not imagine being in a world, where the job is ~~more~~ more important than other things like travel, life experience...

I think there is too much of the focus and determination. I think it's like where everybody is like a robot and everybody is just on their phone and plan the next meeting.

So for me it would be to strict, I think.
